Don't Believe All You Hear —Or What You Think You Hear

Believing all that you hear—or think you hear—can have disastrous results, as Mrs. Robert Hanson of 4640 Nevada av. and a neighbor, Esther Franklin, discovered last week.

Janis Hanson, 11, and Barbara Franklin, 12, were swimming at Miller's Grove. Their mommies were on their way out to pick them up when one of the younger children in the car spotted a "kitty."

That's no kitty," Mrs. Hanson wisely explained, "that's a baby skunk." The children insisted that they pick up the skunk, but Mrs. Hanson refused.

Then Mrs. Franklin "remembered" hearing just recently that baby skunks don't give off an odor like their pops and moms do. The two women finally agreed it would be safe to give the stranger a ride.

Everything went fine until the skunk sneaked under the seat and caught his—or her—tail in the springs. It was then that both women discovered how wrong Mrs. Franklin had been. This skunk was a little guy, but there was nothing small about his smell.

With the aid of a farmer the skunk was removed—but not the odor.

Bob Hanson has finally decided only time and a bottle of deodorant can defeat the aroma. But he had some great suggestions, like scrubbing the upholstery with tomato juice and calling the game warden, who has a special de-skunking chemical.

But the best idea came from the person who told him to remove all the upholstery and bury it in soft, moist dirt for three weeks. Ugh!

Something New

"No, sir, I wasn't drinking," the drunk told Judge Carl Kessler.

"Then how did you get drunk?" asked the judge.

"Well, they sprayed it on me."

"Sprayed?"
